LOOSE LEAF TEA MENU

White Tea

A detailed line drawing of a tea plant branch with several leaves and buds, positioned in the top-left corner of the page.

White Tea

As with the other types of teas, white tea is produced from the camellia tea plant. It is specifically made from the youngest tea leaves and tea buds, And it's very rare since it is the least processed of all teas. Once the young leaves and buds are harvested, they are steamed before being dried. People who have a problem with caffeine will find white tea to be attractive since it has a lower concentration. The tea has a light flavor and color. It is much appreciated due to its natural delicacy and sweetness, its complexity and subtlety. There is very little caffeine in white tea.

OASIS MANGO WHITE TEA

The Oasis Mango White Tea blend from English Tea Store is an oasis of tropical mango flavor. The flavor is delicate and round with light honey notes, deep hits of mango and a lightly astringent finish.

PAI MU TAN WHITE TEA

The Pai Mu Tan White Tea blend from English Tea Store is a clear slightly pale cup with a fresh aroma and a smooth velvety flavor. Delicate jammy notes are reminiscent of Keemun or a mild Bordeaux. This tea has a more delicate flavor and is best enjoyed without milk.

Pai Mu Tan White Tea is the highest grade of white tea available before one enters the stratosphere in pricing for white teas such as Peony White Needle Tea. Pai Mu Tan leaves are plucked from a special varietal tea bush called Narcissus or chaicha bushes.
